Excerpt: . . . end will be the first among millions of travelers expected this summer. They will be among the first this summer to find what the GAO office has found: substandard lodging that fails to provide some of the most basic comforts. In Sequoia and Kings Canyon National Park, set in the towering Sierra Nevada Mountains and covered by groves of giant Sequoias which have stood for thousands of years, this beauty stands in stark contrast to many of the facilities provided in the park. The guests who will use these public bathrooms will be greeted with eyesores such as mildew, ants, stained shower pans, leaky faucets, spit wads, chipped paint and graffiti, to name a few. Many rooms at Sequoia and Kings Canyon do not meet some of the most basic standards, lacking telephones, locks on doors, windows, electric outlets, et cetera. What the GAO found in Sequoia and Kings Canyon is representative of a concessions program within the Department of Interior that lacks uniformity, consistency and accountability. The General...
