R.E. Phillips, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Remember the snips of family stories overheard as you were growing up? These are the basis of this novel about my mother and grandmother, Marti and Anna. My Cuban-American family emigrated to New York City in the early twentieth century. Both were born into a Cuban rural family of vegueros, small tobacco farmers. The novel follows the womens s paths trekking through history and their stormy relationship as Anna travels to Spain, Morocco, and New Year as an au pair, then settles in New York City. Marti had resided in a Havana boardng school until at age thirteen her mother sends for her. When she arrives in 1926, Marti is faced with several shocking facts which affect her relationship with her mother. Among them is that Anna has increased her age by two years, so Marti can work. Marti must attend school only at night and forgo her dream of studying voice. Despite this, Marti learns to love the man she also blames, Jimmy, who lives with Anna. Then continues singing, first in the kitchen, then at a local social club. Marti reluctantly adjusts to her new culture. She marries a spirited Cuban-American from Tampa, Florida who she meets in her mother s Manhattan brownstone, where Alfredo s sister and family have moved. Alfredo lives his life to its fullest, even though he has a damaged heart due to childhood rheumatic fever. Alfredo s siblings join him in New York. The history of Alfredo s family is explored from the early history of Cuba until their migration into the cigar producing city of Tampa. Portions of Marti and her husband Alfredo s dreams are fulfilled with the birth of children and the...
