Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Defiant Hearts At all events, the great lady did not want to die and she followed with touching docility the directions of her medical adviser. The doctor, expected to be ready at a moment's notice when summoned to the castle, could have no general practice. Besides, in the little town there were already four other physicians who scarcely earned their daily bread. As to the remuneration for attendance and daily consultations at the ducal court, it was not dazzlingly large; her-serene Highness paid about seven hundred and fifty dollars annually for herself and her entire household, but in addition to this her dear May had free lodging, so and so many cords of beech wood, and also several orders of the ducal house. But he was satisfied with this, since he knew well that he would have to wear out more than one pair of shoes to earn his salary as a plain practitioner. He valued home and fuel above income, and lived, honest and upright and happy, with his wife, who fully shared her husband's opinions.
